

Aylin Zons

Aylin Zons advises companies, board members, managing directors and executives comprehensively on all individual and collective labour law issues, in particular on employment and service contracts, separation processes and the enforcement of claims in court.

Aylin Zons is a certified labour law attorney and has many years of experience in advising medium-sized companies and executives on labour law.

She places particular importance on providing individual advice and asserting the interests of her clients. Due to her early specialisation in employment law and her experience in the legal department of large corporations, she is familiar with the requirements of her clients and can develop individual solutions for complex problems.

In addition, Aylin Zons advises companies, managing directors and freelancers on social security law, in particular on issues relating to the existence of dependent employment and the associated insurance obligation as well as on status determination procedures.
